

As your MHGS site includes a fair bit of ephemera I thought I would send you this picture of an obscure relic - the badge of the Moseley Hall Industrial Archaeology Society, which I came across today in a bag of miscellaneous old badges. The original is not in very good condition so I have done a bit of crude Photoshopping to give a better idea of the shape. It must date from around 1968, I think. The society was set up by me, Bob Keaveney and Roger Pennington. I can't remember who else was involved or how we got the artwork for the badge done - no computers then, of course. I remember that we did a photo and artefacts exhibition at a school fair. Obscure as it may seem, it was one of the things that led me to my degree and subsequent career as a town planner.

Best wishes,

Richard Simmons
